To Chicago-based artist Patrick Fitzgerald, his miniature car sculptures are a means of traveling through time. Born from a fascination with the soap box derby cars of his youth, each vehicle is an exercise in imagining the future through the lens of the past - or vice versa.

Entitled "Neapolitan Car," this sculptural car pays homage to Fitzgerald's childhood favorite ice cream flavor, with Bonnie Doon ice cream parlor in Mishawaka, Indiana credited as the imaginary sponsor. Built from found materials collected over the years, the futuristic form is layered with personal memories and keepsakes from the past. Continued...
