GREEN GLASS FISHERMAN'S FLOAT

$128

c. 1900 • Shandong, China • Glass • Collection #TLB133

H: 11.0" Dia: 11.0"

This beautiful green sphere is an early 20th century glass float used by fishermen to keep their fishing nets or droplines afloat in the ocean. The hollow float would have been encased by rope netting and used just like a modern buoy. Because these floats were commonly produced from recycled bottles, most antique glass floats found today are a lovely shade of green. A fantastic collector's item, we love these vintage floats as a sculptural accent to a garden landscape or beachy interior.

Floats vary slightly in dimensions and color. Approximately 11-12" in diameter each.
