BLACK CLAY VESSEL

$480

c. 1900 • Shanxi, China • Ceramic • Collection #TLB141C

H: 9.75" Dia: 11.5"

Sculpted during the early 20th century in China's Shanxi province, this vessel has a smoky black exterior on one side that transitions into a golden brown on the other. With balanced proportions and a beautifully irregular unglazed surface, this vessel was once used for storing dry goods. The earthenware jar has a tapered form with a narrow base, high shoulders and a rounded neck. Left undecorated, the jar has a quiet beauty, patterned only by firing imperfections and the brushed texture of its speckled slip clay finish. With rich surface texture, we love this storied vessel as a planter for garden foliage or indoor houseplants. Continued...
