Named for its half moon shape, demi-lune tables such as this were designed to sit against a wall, displaying precious objects and porcelain. Crafted by an artisan in China's Hebei province, this exquisite 19th-century demi-lune is unusual for its bulbous form legs, perfectly balanced to support the table's solid plank top. The apron is carved with a finely beaded trim, continuing down each leg to the cloud-form scrolled feet. A luminous dark lacquer finish gives the table a glossy shine, beautifully worn from age and use.
