DRIP GLAZE KITCHEN JAR

$580

c. 1900 • Shanxi, China • Terra Cotta, Glaze • Collection #TLB155J

H: 8.5" Dia: 9.5"

A captivating textured glaze coats the simple, slightly-tapered form of this Qing-dynasty kitchen jar. Drip patterns and firing imperfections give the jar fantastic character, casting shades of light and dark brown across the vessel. Crafted in the late 19th century, the wide-mouth jar was once used to store food in a Qing-dynasty kitchen, as evidenced by its interior glaze. The translucent glaze exhibits subtle crazing, the surface textured with a web of tiny cracks.
