GLAZED VINEGAR JAR

$448

c. 1900 • Shanxi, China • Ceramic • Collection #BJGG0771

H: 8.5" Dia: 10.5"

A dark, iridescent glaze clings to the angular shoulders of this petite jar, dripping down the textured sides in contrasting rivulets of navy blue. Crafted in the late 19th century, this wide-mouth jar with strap handles was once used to ferment and store vinegar in a Qing-dynasty kitchen, as evidenced by its interior glaze. Exposed at the base and lip, the vessel's shimmering glaze exhibits a rich range of colors and catches the light beautifully.
