This 19th-century English drop leaf table has an oblong, oval top resting on four straight legs. The square legs taper slightly towards the floor and end in brass caster wheels. The hinged leaves are supported by extendable arms in the center of the table, each fitted with an iron ring handle. Devoid of elaborate carvings, the table relies on the natural beauty of its oak wood construction for its decorative appeal. With clean lines and balanced proportions, this simple drop leaf table blends effortlessly into interiors of all styles.
