Upon discovering a weathered steel drum that had been warped to resemble the sleeve of a garment, artist Gordon Chandler was inspired to embark on a series of kimono sculptures formed from found metal scraps. With an eye to the aesthetic possibilities of this humble material, Chandler invests reclaimed steel with sculptural fluidity and a wry sense of form.

"DISC JACKET" BY GORDON CHANDLER

The jacket has a dark green coated finish, patterned with subtle stamped text and a wabi-sabi rusted texture. The artist's name and date of creation have been stamped onto a small steel garment label secured just above the collar.
