Once used on a provincial Chinese farm to hold water or animal feed, this early 20th-century stone trough is celebrated today for its organic form and rustic authenticity. Hand-carved from solid limestone, the trough has a rectangular form with slightly tapered sides and an oval interior basin. The chiseled surface has weathered with time, developing subtle asymmetry and color variations. Drilled with a central drainage hole, the small trough can be used as a planter for lush greenery or florals, a wonderful addition to a garden or patio.

Trough has been drilled with a drainage hole.
