Crafted of dark brown walnut, a wood prized for its open-grained texture and warm tones, this 19th-century wine table expresses the refined forms of Ming-dynasty furniture. With clean lines and a dark lacquer finish, the table's streamlined form features rounded humpback stretchers and long legs ending in subtly hooved feet. Once used as a gathering place to pour wine and make toasts, this minimal console table adds storied history to the modern home.
